Peugeot 107 Sport XS

“With its funky styling and colourful personality, the 107 has always been big on attitude, but for this exciting new addition to the range we’ve added a huge injection of street style, giving it the potential to become one of the cult cars of 2007.”

Andrew Montague
107 Product Manager

Model featured in Raven Black.
Carbon fibre effect rear panel and SP grille are dealer-fitted options at extra cost.

There's a new über-cool face in the city.

The 107 is back in black, silver, white and red with a dynamic new look.

Everything about it has been designed to make an impact, from the bold colour-keyed stripes that run from bumper to bumper (with matching door mirrors, naturally) and the business-like front spoiler to the striking 14" six-spoke alloys and the chunky, chrome twin sports exhausts.

But the attraction of the 107 Sport XS lies in more than its racy exterior:

This highly individual city car also has a real catch-me-if-you-can attitude. Zipping from lane to lane, nipping round narrow streets, its eager 1.0 litre, 3 cylinder, 12v petrol engine, 5-speed manual gearbox and confident handling make it a really fun driving partner. And definitely the 107 to watch.

Open the door, step inside and you'll be instantly impressed by the cabin of the 107 Sport XS – the leather steering wheel, the red detailing on the dashboard, the red gear knob and the innovative, pod-mounted rev counter.

perfect driving position. You even have the option of adding air-conditioning to help you keep your cool in any situation.

Out on the road, you'll find the 107 Sport XS is really easy to manoeuvre. Electrically-assisted power steering plus a neat turning circle (just 9.46 m) make it an expert at weaving through city streets and squeezing into tight parking spaces.

It's also got the XS factor when it comes to comfort. The big windows and steeply-raked windscreen make the whole car feel airy and spacious. While the height adjustable steering wheel means it's easy to find your

It's also extremely frugal to run, averaging a thrifty 61.4 miles per gallon (full figures on opposite page).

The 107 Sport XS scores highly on active and passive safety too. Its effective braking system features ABS with Electronic Brake Force Distribution and Cornering Stability Control and it's also been awarded an impressive 4 stars in the Euro NCAP safety tests for both adult and child occupation.
