SATELLITE

Perhaps the best way to describe the 1973 Satellites is to say they are built to be seen ... not heard.

Torsion-Quiet Ride

The reason is Chrysler's famed Torsion-Quiet Ride now standard on all new Satellites. A unique combination of front torsion bar suspension, unibody construction and sound isolators. The result is a quiet, controlled riding experience.

And the Sebring-Plus has even more sound-reducing features to make it the quietest intermediate-size car ever built by Chrysler Corporation.

Contemporary Styling

The "seen" part is obvious. Though it's a family car in every respect, the contemporary look is anything but dull.

If you take a good look at the Satellite 4-door and 2-door models, you'll see that they are distinctly different in style. Satellite designers believe that two different body types deserve two different kinds of engineering and styling. The result is beautiful individuality in two and four-door models with no compromising. Each emerges with its best proportions intact. Each is just right for its own particular needs.

Extra-Protection Bumpers

For 1973 Chrysler engineers have designed extra-protection bumpers that are capable of impacting a fixed barrier at 5 mph in the front and 2½ mph in the rear.

Electronic Ignition System

With every new Satellite you also get an Electronic Ignition System standard. Compared to a conventional ignition system, Satellite's system is a hands-down winner. Satellite's new system eliminates distributor points and condenser, so there are none to replace ... and you never have to worry about a periodic point adjustment. You also get a consistently higher voltage—by as much as 35%—for more dependable cold and damp weather starts. Excluding routine spark plug service, the system is virtually maintenance free.

Front disc brakes, for more dependable braking action are also standard. And if you want, you can add a power booster to them. (Standard on Station Wagons.)

Other options include air conditioning, vinyl roof, AM or AM/FM stereo radio, and a sun roof. This factory-installed, sliding metal sun roof is operated by a manual crank and includes a wind deflector. It's available on all 2-door models.

A family car that's functional and still has flair. The 1973 Plymouth Satellite measures up.
